poP uP sHoP

Three local artists will exhibit in Albany over Anzac day in a "poP uP sHoP" in the Bay Merchants Building at Middleton Beach.

Leanne Fry is facilitating the project which will have work by Albany Photographer Louise Alberton (who was a finalist in this years National Portrait Photography Prize), Justine Gambin (Walpole textile artist), the Peaceful Bay Beanie Company and Leanne's own work will be on display for the public to view for 5 days from 24th-28th April. This opportunity gives great exposure for the artists and allows the wider community as well as visitors and residents of Albany to see some of the fantastic works done in regional areas.

Living in the Regions

The Department of Regional Development and Lands (RDL) will shortly be undertaking a regional 'quality of life' survey and are seeking community support and involvement in this important initiative.

The survey will ask people why they live in the regions and their perception of their quality of life. RDL will be seeking as many regionally based people as possible to complete the survey which will be available by mail and online. The wide network of Community Resource Centres (CRCs) is well placed to help the Department to achieve this outcome.

There will be a Department of Regional Development and Lands representative visiting Walpole shortly to talk with and listen to the communities views on the importance of and roles of the CRC into the future. This is an exciting opportunity for the views of regional people to be heard, and will help the State Government develop projects and programs for the benefit of regional communities.

The Walpole Community Resource Centre encourages the whole community to participate in this important research, and showcase the valuable role CRCs have to both Government and our local communities.
